

Department of Anesthesiology in Princeton Hospital, Princeton, New Jersey.

Dr. Samuel R. Ramoutar (M.D., Howard, '50) of Brooklyn, New York, became a diplomate of the American Board of Radiology in December 1969. Dr. Ramoutar is a staff radiologist at Methodist Hospital in Brooklyn.

Dr. Peter R. N. Chatard, Jr. (M.D., Rochester) of Seattle, Washington, became a diplomate of the American Board of Otolaryngology in May 1969.

At the September 1969 meeting of the American College of Surgeons at San Francisco, Drs. Eugene N. Mitchell (M.D., Missouri, '60), Harry Revels, III (M.D., St. Louis, '56), John Riley (M.D., Howard, '51) and Herman E. Russell (M.D., Geneva, '56) were inducted as fellows of the College. All four served their residencies at Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

Deaths

Dr. James Robert Gladden (M.D., Meharry, '39) died suddenly of a heart attack on December 8, 1969. He was 58. Dr. Gladden became in 1949 the first Negro to be certified by the American Board of Orthopedic Surgery. At the time of his passing he was clinical associate professor of orthopedic surgery at Howard University and consultant and senior attendant orthopedic surgeon at the Rogers Memorial Hospital. He was also a member of the courtesy staffs of Providence Hospital, Washington Hospital Center and Prince Georges Hospital.

Born in Charlotte, North Carolina in 1911, Dr. Gladden graduated from Long Island University, Brooklyn, New York. There he was a varsity basketball and tennis player. He continued his interest in athletics by serving as a basketball and football official in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association for 10 years.

He graduated magna cum laude from Meharry Medical College in 1939, receiving the Nelson Award for the highest four year average in the class. He was elected there to the Kappa Pi honorary medical society. The next three years he spent at Provident Hospital in Baltimore as intern, resident in pathology, and assistant resident in surgery. He then came to Freedmen's Hospital in Washington, D.C., where he spent a year as assistant resident in surgery and a year as resident in orthopedic surgery, followed by a year as assistant in orthopedic surgery. He was assistant clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at Howard from 1951-64 and served as chief of the Division of Orthopedic Surgery from 1952-64. He was a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons. He was a member of the Washington Orthopedic Society. He had served the NMA as chairman of the Section on Orthopedics.

In 1959 the Long Island University Alumni Association presented Dr. Gladden the Metcalfe Award in recognition of his "dedicated service." In addition to the NMA, Dr. Gladden was a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, the Medico-Chirurgical Society of the District of Columbia.

He is survived by his wife Grace, and son, James Robert, Jr., a student at Syracuse University, and a daughter, Mrs. Pamela Raiford.

Funeral services were held in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel of Howard University at which tributes were rendered by Hon. Walter E. Washington, mayor of the District of Columbia; Dr. Joseph R. Young, president of the Board of Directors of Rogers Memorial Hospital; and Dr. James M. Nabrit, Jr., president-emeritus of Howard University.

Dr. Clarence Walker Hogans (M.D., Howard, '29) of New York City died on November 19, 1969, in Polyclinic Hospital after a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 68. He was buried at Laurel Grove Cemetery in Paterson, New Jersey, his birthplace. Dr. Hogans served an internship at Harlem Hospital from 1929-31 and received clinical training in obstetrics and gynecology at New York Postgraduate and Beth Israel Hospitals. He also trained in pathology at Women's Hospital. He was certified by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology in 1951 and served as attending gynecologist and later as chief of a division of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Harlem Hospital. Dr. Hogans was attending gynecologist at Mount Morris Hospital and was on the staffs of Sydenham, Misericordia, and Wickersham Hospitals. Dr. Hogans was a member of the National Medical Association and the American Medical Association. He was a fellow of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Dr. Hogans was a star on his high school football team in Paterson and also at Lincoln University in Pennsylvania. He is survived by his wife, Catherine; a son, Clarence, Jr., and by several nephews and nieces. He was a member of Memorial Baptist Church in New York City.

Sorey, H. S., Jr. Discriminatory Practices in Hospital Medical Staff Appointments. Center for Health Administration Studies, Univ. of Chicago, 1969. 30 pp.

Haynes, M. A. Problems Facing the Negro in Medicine Today. JAMA, 209:1067, 1969.